From Library Journal

Kast (psychology, Zurich Univ.) here explains Jung's concept of the individuation process in humanity, which states that the individual's goal is to discover who he or she really is. As Kast explains, "A major part of the process is self acceptance, acceptance not only of all of one's possibilities, but also of one's difficulties; these are essential because to a significant degree they comprise our uniqueness. Accepting one's self, one's possibilities as well as one's difficulties, is a basic virtue that is to be realized in the individuation process." The author presents a clear understanding of Jung's concept of the symbol, the archetype, and the process of self-realization. The work is aimed at informed lay readers, although general readers should have little trouble reaching a basic understanding of Jungian depth psychology.

Brilliant Book on Jung and Archetypes

By Mother Mac

This book explained so many things, basic elements of Jungian psychology, so clearly. I'm studying Jungian psychology at a university, a graduate program, and this book is one of the best I have read on the subject. I recommend it for everyone interested in Jung.
